Economic Impact of Historic Preservation in Kentucky

Commonwealth Preservation Advocates, a statewide, lobbying organization on issues of historic preservation, has joined forces with the Kentucky Heritage Council to commission a study on the economic impact of historic preservation throughout Kentucky.

The study will show the positive effects of preservation on jobs, business and the overall health of the Commonwealth's communities.

Armed with the study, preservation advocates will be better positioned to inform local, state, and national elected officials about preservation's positives, to increase the general understanding of the value of investing in historic assets, and to build support for particular preservation projects.

The study will show the positive effects of preservation on jobs, business and overall health of the Commonwealth's communities.

Copies of the study will be printed and broadly distributed throughout the state after a May 1997 media event.

In order to maximize the information contained within the study and to promote the media event and distribution of the study results, a series of training sessions have been held in April at various locations around the state. -from cpa newsletter, ga-

PRESERVATION BITS

" Salm's Building Now Sheffer Hoffman Law Offices!

Owensboro Symphony attendees were invited to a post-symphony reception this past winter at the new, expanded offices of Sheffer Hoffman attorneys-at-law. After milling throughout the building's several renovated floors, the crowds lingered at the buffet table with its irresistible offerings. Congratulations to Bruce Peters, Sheffer Hoffman, and all involved in polishing another jewel of Main Street Owensboro.

" Historical Quarterly Ceases Publication; Lee Dew Retires

The Daviess County Historical Quarterly is no longer being published by the Daviess County Historical Society. After 11 years of valiant service, Quarterly Editor Lee Dew has retired to other interests. PA wishes to thank Lee Dew (and Aloma Dew, former PA board member) for their many years producing the Quarterly. It represents a wonderful resource for current historians and preservationists in Owensboro-Daviess County. Future generations will turn to it, as well, to better understand their past. Now, are there any volunteers out there who want to carry on the tradition?

" Gillam House Refurbishing

Bob Kirtley is heading the effort to turn the old Gillam House at 415 Saint Ann Street into shared offices for small non-profit agencies. The two-story, brick building, owned by the Safe Children Foundation, appears structurally sound, but needs repairs to the roof and windows. Contact Bob Kirtley if you wish to volunteer your time or services. The idea is for a number of small charities or other non-profits to share secretarial and office equipment expenses, and to have a staffed mailing address and phone answering service. Sounds great. Good luck, Bob!

WHOOOPS! Trip Last Fall Fell Through; Time to Spring Back into Action

Sorry, but we just couldn't resist the pun. Preservation-minded tourists must be very busy folks. PA received few reservations and, therefore, decided to cancel the Fall Day-Trip to Madison, Indiana, last October.

But, because the itinerary sounded so very enjoyable, PA has revived it as the Spring Day-Trip to Madison, Indiana.

Those who have experienced PA trips over the years know that a good time is had by all.

So, please join us for this promising one. See page 3 for details.

'Stately' Mary Ellen Hart Taught in the Public Schools of Owensboro for Many Years

PA Board Member Dot Howell spent some time at the Kentucky Room at the Public Library researching the Hart family members who resided for many years at 521 Daviess Street. The pre-Civil War home was recently auctioned, along with its remarkable collection of books, furniture and other items, many of which were more than a century old.

As reported in the Messenger-Inquirer by Greg Kocher, Feb. 19, the most recent resident, Margaret Elizabeth Evans, died Jan. 22 at age 88. Evans had lived since the 1940s with her former sorority sister, Ellen Hart Smith, who died in 1985.

What did Dot find? A reference to "H. P. Hart, school-teacher" in Wiggins & Weaver's Ohio River Directory for Owensboro, dated 1871-1872. Also, in Emerson & Williams' Owensboro Directory, 1882-83, Dot found a listing for "Mrs. M. E. Hart, teacher, upper ward school."

Most interesting, however, is the picture included here and the narrative Dot found in Sixty Years of Owensboro, 1883-1943, by William Foster Hayes, which was mentioned in the newspaper story.

The following is an excerpt:

"Mr. H. P. Hart is also mentioned ... as one of the best of the earlier teachers, and the one who started the Owensboro Academy.... Mr. Hart afterwards taught on the south side of Fifth Street between Lewis and Daviess Street, where he was assisted by Mrs. M. E. Singleton and occasionally by Mrs. Hart.

Mary Ellen Hart

"After Mr. Hart's death, his widow, Mrs. Mary Ellen Hart, taught in the public schools of Owensboro for many years, and there are many who will have the kindest and most pleasant memories of her stately but lovely and gracious presence, cheerful disposition, and efficiency as a teacher. Before her marriage she was a Miss McClarty, and was reared in Hardinsburg, a girlhood friend of my mother. Her daughter, 'Miss Susie,' became the wife of our own E. W. Smith, and is survived by a daughter, Miss Ellen Hart Smith. Miss Lettie Boyd, another teacher with a record of long and honorable service, is Mrs. Hart's niece."

We thought you might find interest in this historical note. -ga-
